THE BOOK.

A WOMAN OF THE CENTURY extends to eight hundred-thirty pages, size of page, eight by eleven inches. It is printed from an attractive full-face, modern type on heavy, high-grade, coated book paper, and the press work is unexcelled. The bibliography is by Charles Wells Moulton, the engravings and electrotypes by the Buffalo Electrotype and Engraving Company, the press work by the Buffalo Printing Company, the paper by the Worthington Paper Company, the binding by the American Book. In mechanical execution it is as perfect as it could be made by the combined efforts of the above firms. The volume contains fourteen hundred-seventy biographies, and thirteen hundred-thirty engravings of a uniform size and style. It is sold by subscription only, by the publisher or an authorized representative.

PROSPECTUS.

THE publication of A WOMAN OF THE CENTURY has been undertaken to provide a Biographical record of a remarkable era in the History of the World. Woman's place in modern life is fully recognized, and the work will meet the requirements demanded by a discriminating public. It is the most important undertaking of its kind ever attempted. It embraces biographical sketches of all women prominently connected with the present age of woman's activity; all women noteworthy in the church, at the bar, in literature and music, in art and the drama, in science and invention, in social and political reform, in commerce or philanthropy. In brief, includes the name of every woman in every branch of human activity worthy of note, who is identified with American progress and civilization in the present day.

THE BIOGRAPHIES.

The biographies are of sufficient fullness to include all facts deserving mention, and taken together they will afford a complete record of that branch of story referring to American women of the present century. It is intended to make each characterize a likeness which the world will immediately prize; which will give the underlying motive to individual endeavor, the secret of her success, the methods and means of her progress, and the end and the aspiration of her thought. It has been

INDEX, moreover, to render the Cyclopædia journal, as well as entertaining and instructive, making those articles treating of important events and measures constitute noteworthy eras of national history. Each sketch was placed in hands selected from the whole country as best fitted for the task, and then it was revised and arranged by the editor to make one harmonious whole.

THE PORTRAITS.

The biographical sketches are accompanied by original half-tone engravings, made direct from photograph, and executed in the highest form of art.
These engravings, thirteen hundred in number, form one of the most valuable picture galleries ever given to the public through the medium of a printing press.

THE EDITORS.

The fact that the work is edited by two well-known women whose world-wide reputation is second to none in their respective spheres of literary activity, is sufficient guarantee of its literary excellence and high standing.

THE PUBLISHER.

Mr. Moulton's name is well and favorably known as the publisher of The Magazine of Poetry. In various standard publications bear his imprint. The publisher respectfully announces that A Woman of the Century is sold only by subscription only through his authorized agents.
